Associate of Arts Degree

American Studies English – Literary Studies or Writing Modern Languages – French or Spanish

Humanities programs at Northwest College emphasize the development of critical thinking skills. Students pursuing a program of study within the Humanities Division at Northwest take courses not only in their field of study, but also in a wide range of areas which fulfill general graduation requirements.

While humanities programs are transfer-oriented, all courses are designed to fulfill students' needs for human enrichment and individual accomplishment. These courses are available for students who want to expand their experiences within the humanities, whether they are pursuing a Northwest College degree or certificate, or are attending on a part-time basis.

American Studies

A two-year program of interdisciplinary study, the American Studies program focuses on multiple aspects of American culture as well as its relationships with global society. Closely collaborating with faculty advisors, students plan a coherent sequence of courses with an emphasis on one or more conventional academic disciplines, ranging from the humanities to the sciences, in combination with interdisciplinary core courses. By customizing one of the four American Studies Options detailed below, students prepare for transfer to a variety of baccalaureate programs in the liberal arts.

American Studies is an ideal choice for students who wish to create a course of study outside the traditional curriculum. It is also an appropriate program for students who are undecided about a single major.

Students must successfully complete core courses with a "C-" or better to meet program requirements. Students planning to transfer to a four-year program may need to have additional hours beyond the program requirements at Northwest College in order to transfer in as a junior. These students should consult with their advisor and the appropriate four-year college catalog.

Options within the American Studies Program

Several options are available within American Studies for students to customize their programs according to their unique combination of interests. The Interdisciplinary Studies Option offers the most possibilities for customizing a degree.

Interdisciplinary Studies

Students can use the Interdisciplinary Studies Option in American Studies to pursue a coherent program of study that:

- combines a general overview of issues in American life with a more specific, interdisciplinary study of a single theme; and
- develops the student's exploratory instincts and skills at forming thoughtful and intuitive connections.

Media & Culture Studies

The pervasive presence and effects of all forms of media are prompting a need for informed critics in addition to new practitioners. Students who choose the Media & Culture Studies Option in American Studies will:

- gain historical and critical overviews of forms of contemporary media;
- analyze the effects that the media have on social behavior and values; and
- explore current changes in the directions of technology and anticipate their impact on social behavior and values.

Regional Ecology & Cultural Values

American Studies students in this area would examine the frequently opposed perspectives of sciences and the humanities by taking courses that:

- study the history and geology of the Yellowstone ecosystem;
- consider the role played by ecological values in shaping artistic depictions of the region's natural environment;
- debate relevant current issues in the contexts of history and philosophy; and
- examine the social and political values that are invoked as the basis of public policies.

Examples of courses that can be taken to fulfill the Interdisciplinary Studies, Media & Culture Studies, or Regional Ecology & Cultural Values Options are drawn from the listing of American Studies Core Electives that follows.

Native American Studies

Students working in this area explore the richness of Native American culture by following a course of study that incorporates multiple academic perspectives. Students plan a course sequence that:

- examines the cultural histories and artistic products of Native Americans, both today and in the past;
- considers issues that Native Americans face today, with attention to social institutions that directly affect the quality of contemporary Native American life.

Examples of courses that can be taken to fulfill the Native American Studies Option are drawn from the following list of American Studies Core Electives.

English Education

Students who plan to teach at the secondary level should complete coursework both in the Secondary Education program and in English. Many options exist for teaching English, English/ Communication, or English/Journalism, and students need to work closely with their Northwest advisors to monitor the requirements of transfer institutions.

For those interested in exploring teaching possibilities, opportunities exist at Northwest for peer tutoring experiences.

English – Literary Studies or Writing

This is a two-year program of study to prepare students for transfer, with an emphasis in Literary Studies or in Writing. Students normally transfer as English majors or English/Secondary Education double majors. In order to achieve an AA in English, students must successfully complete core courses with a "C-" or better to meet program requirements. Students planning to transfer to a four-year program may need to have additional hours beyond the program requirements at Northwest College in order to transfer in as a junior. These students should consult with their advisor and the appropriate four-year college catalog.

Foreign Language Education

Students who plan to teach at the secondary level should complete coursework both in the Secondary Education program and in their primary language (French or Spanish). Students need to work closely with their Northwest advisors to monitor the requirements of transfer institutions. Language majors have found it helpful to initiate study of a second foreign language during their first two years of college work. Northwest's course offerings and scheduling support such an option.

Modern Languages

This program allows students to focus on the French or Spanish languages for their associate of arts degree. Students must successfully complete core courses with a "C-" or better to meet program requirements. After completing the core requirements, students will have the foundation necessary to continue at the intermediate or advanced levels of French or Spanish at a transfer institution. With the choices offered in Recommended Core Electives, students will also be exposed to a second foreign language and classes that focus on the relationship of language, culture and society. Students planning to transfer to a four-year program may need to have additional hours beyond the program requirements at Northwest College in order to transfer in as a junior. These students should consult with their advisor and the appropriate four-year college catalog.

Philosophy

Northwest College offers a small number of introductory-level philosophy courses which are open to all students, regardless of their educational or occupational goals. Courses in Critical Thinking and Introduction to Philosophy discuss essential issues in human experience and develop thinking skills in practical ways. Courses focused on Social and Political Philosophy and on Philosophy of Religion, probe historical and contemporary social issues. In addition to fulfilling certain general education requirements, Northwest's offerings in Philosophy and other humanities areas can provide a basis for a major in philosophy (a popular pre-law choice) at four-year institutions.
