Forever TRAPPERS

Chris Taggart, Stefani Hicswa, and Shelby Wetzel

The Trapper Rendezvous symbolized a special ‘coming together’ during frontier times. In that spirit, the NWC Foundation unites a community in support of students, faculty and staff at Northwest College.

Large and small, YOUR gifts to support scholarships, programs, facilities and our general fund are important to us and make a difference in the lives of NWC students. It’s our pleasure to present the Foundation’s 2018 Annual Report.

And remember... Once a Trapper, Always a Trapper!

Education MATTERS...

“NWC turned my life around and gave me a chance to succeed.”

– Dick Krajczar

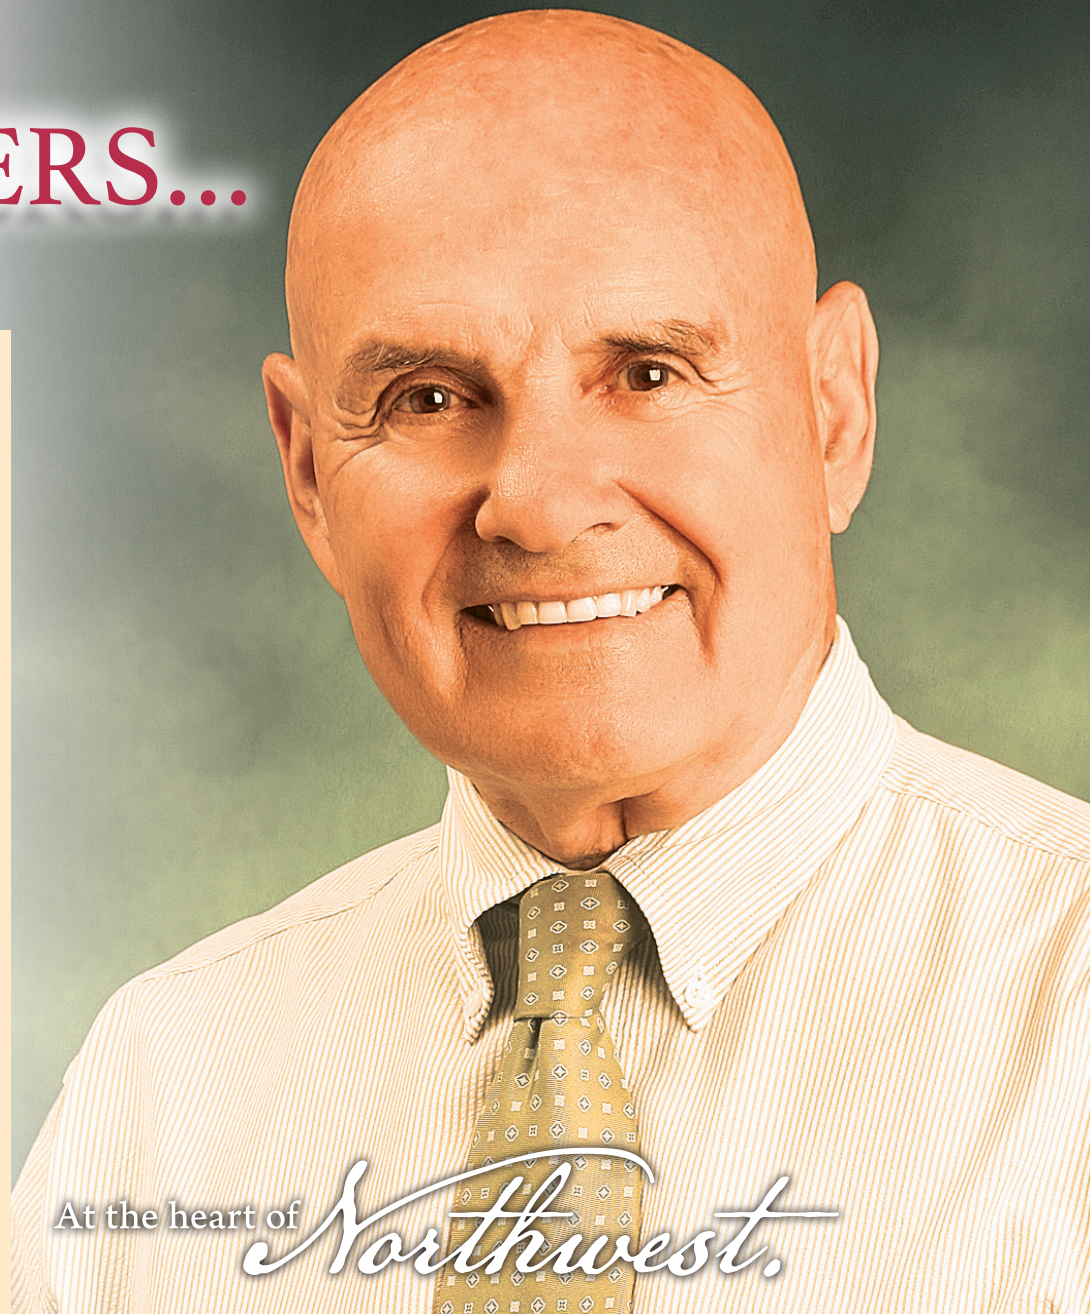

Northwest College recently lost a great friend – as did the greater global community.

Born in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, Richard (Dick) Krajczar grew up in a row house with his mother and three brothers. His dad dropped out of school after finishing sixth grade and worked in the blast furnaces of the Bethlehem steel mills until he passed away at age 39. His mom only completed eighth grade and became a maid.

A talented athlete, Dick’s ticket out of eastern Pennsylvania came in the form of a football scholarship to Northwest College.

“NWC turned my life around and gave me a chance to succeed,” noted Krajczar. “I came to Powell from the steel mills in Bethlehem in 1962 with $65 and a dream of going to college. I am forever thankful for NWC taking a chance on a kid from a humble background who had average grades.”

Dick launched his education career as an NWC student. After completing his bachelor’s degree at the University of Wyoming and teaching in Cheyenne, he dedicated more than 45 years to international education. Dick’s path would take him to Afghanistan, Syria, Jordan, Malaysia and the Philippines, and evolve in many ways. He was serving as the executive director for the East Asia Regional Council of Schools at the time of his death in February 2019.

In the open spaces of Wyoming, Dick found a new home – one he would continue to return to throughout his global adventures. He learned about individualism and self-reliance, but he also learned the value of community if you were committed to being part of it.

“NWC and the Powell community were like a family who helped kids realize their dreams. Coach Harold Farmer and the Heasler, Martin, Brunner, Sandi and Kaiser families gave me work and a chance to finish school,” said Krajczar.

Dick experienced how education provides a road to a better life. “A college degree opens doors and allows for people to make better persons of themselves,” he noted. He was appreciative that the faculty at Northwest College took time to help him navigate the requirements and allow him to grow up.

He also shared, a bit mischievously, that he met his wife, Sherry Fritz, at an NWC basketball game where she was a cheerleader from another community college. The Krajczar family's road traversed the world where Sherry also taught in international schools, and now so do both their children.

In reminiscing about his career, Dick identified that he wanted to give back to the younger generations connected with NWC. He and Sherry endowed an Education scholarship with the NWC Foundation in 2010.

"I wanted to show my gratitude and help other students along the road to become educators to help make a difference in young students' lives," Dick said.

Again in 2017, when Northwest College launched efforts to endow Athletic scholarships, Dick stepped forward to fund a second scholarship, noting that athletics might be the only opportunity some students have to pursue a higher education degree.

In expressing his belief that education changes lives, Krajczar shared a story about his time working as the superintendent of the American Community School in Amman, Jordan. Dick asked a custodian at the school who was scraping to pay for his eight kids to get college educations on a somewhat meager salary why he felt their education was so important. The man replied, "Education is one thing that no one can take away from you!"

"Education is one thing that no one can take away from you!"

Champions Challenge

Scholarships are the lifeblood of NWC Athletics and the department's single largest annual expense. Recent budget cuts have challenged the coaches' ability to recruit quality players, making scholarship money the major fundraising focus of the Trapper boosters.

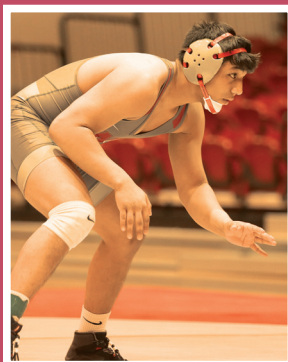

Challenge accepted.

Partnering with the NWC Foundation, a challenge grant was developed with support from the Paul Stock Foundation. The program was designed where PSF matched gifts designated to endowing scholarships for Wyoming high school athletes who participate as members of NWC athletic teams.

Along with a general Wyoming athlete scholarship pool, 17 named scholarship endowments have been established. Commitments of $130,000 and the corresponding matching gift from PSF, means $260,000 will be permanently invested to create ongoing revenue for these athletic scholarships.

The dream of playing college sports is a powerful motivator for student athletes, many of whom are the first from their family to attend college. Access to higher education opens additional doors for student athletes allowing them to be successful in life as well.

Our goal is to produce champions in the classroom, competition and life.

How can you make a difference?

Gifts to the Northwest College Foundation touch all corners of our campus and provide amazing support for our students. We make it easy to give, and offer several ways for you to leave your legacy at NWC.

Whether your gift is in cash, securities, personal property or real estate, we will work to maximize its impact. We will also establish endowments, arrange memorial gifts or honorariums, and process matching gifts.

We can help. Contact the Foundation office today!

ALUMNI PROFILE... Lindsay Linton Buk '10

Artist, photographer and fifth-generation Wyoming native Lindsay Linton Buk grew up in Powell, Wyoming. After earning her bachelor's in history from Middlebury College, she returned to Wyoming to study photographic communications at Northwest College. Currently based in Jackson, Linton has worked as a commercial photographer in New York City and taught photography workshops for Canon. She conceived of Women in Wyoming after moving back to the state and founding her own studio, Linton Productions. Her editorial and commercial work has appeared in Outside and Southwest magazines.

Could you share a little bit of background regarding your inspiration for your Women in Wyoming project?

My inspiration for the series evolved from my own personal journey as a fifth-generation Wyoming woman who came home. Growing up in Powell, where my family goes back five generations, I never imagined I would have a future in my home state. I always thought I'd have to leave to be successful as a creative and wanted to experience more of the world outside of Wyoming.

After completing my bachelor's degree, I found myself back in Wyoming at Northwest College. I gained appreciation for my community and hometown. After earning my photo degree, I moved to NYC where I worked as a photographer and as the studio manager for acclaimed headshot/portrait photographer, Peter Hurley. After three years, I was ready to go out on my own and returned to Jackson where my family is now based. When deciding to plant permanent roots in Wyoming, I consciously made the decision to challenge my idea of Wyoming as limiting, opened my commercial photo studio, Linton Productions, and soon after, created Women in Wyoming.

Now, I am SO creatively challenged and doing the work that fills my soul. That's a pretty great feeling!

How did you know NWC was a good fit for you?

My decision to go back to school at Northwest was spontaneous and serendipitous. After earning my degree at Middlebury, I moved to Los Angeles to pursue dance professionally. Dance was my first passion. I grew up as a classically trained ballerina, jazz and modern dancer at Rocky Mountain School of the Arts in Cody, Wyoming. In college, I was exposed to the hip-hop industry and performed in a pre-professional company where we worked with top L.A. choreographers like Marty Kudelka (Justin Timberlake's choreographer). I wanted to see if I could make it as a dancer and pursue my first passion. After six months in the industry, I was incredibly unhappy and realized dance was best suited as a passion, not my career. I went to work at an 9-5 office position and realized I needed to be in a creative field but one where I had autonomy and freedom.

"If I could do it again, I would go back to school for photography and shoot for National Geographic," a voice inside me said. I mentioned this to my mom, who made me aware of NWC's incredible two-year photo program. I called the director of the program at the time, Craig Satterlee, who enrolled me in the two introductory photo classes. Two weeks later, I was back in school in Powell. I thought I'd give the semester a try and see if it would be a good fit. I fell in love and haven't looked back since!

What do you remember most vividly about your NWC experience?

The mentorships. Compared to my undergrad experience, I found much more genuine support and care at NWC. I'm still very close to my professors and met one of my best friends through the program. I also received an incredible education. Because I already had my bachelor's, I focused entirely on photography at NWC. We received a high-caliber technical education where we had immediate exposure to equipment, lighting and incredible professors. When I moved to NYC after graduating from the program, I felt very equipped and prepared to work in the industry.

The support in the community and the college is unmatched. During my second year in the program, I wanted to create an independent series about the generational farming families in Powell. I mentioned my idea to my portfolio advisor, J.L. "Woody" Wooden. The next day, he came to class and said, "You have a show at the Homesteader Museum in April. Better get to work!" After I shared my idea, he called Rowene Weems, the curator at that time for the museum. She had a window for a show and gave me the opportunity to present my work. It's this type of initiative and belief in potential that exists and flourishes at NWC. Because of that moment, I learned how to produce an independent project and publish a show. I'm now creating my largest-scale work to date, crafting a monumental exhibit for Women in Wyoming at the Buffalo Bill Center of the West this fall!
